SUNDAY (SEPT 21)
"I'M NOT FOOD" - SOLO EXHIBITION
BY JUSTIN CHIANG CHIN PANG

A food chain is a linear sequence of how all organisms are related to each other by the food they eat. Every day, human beings consume various categories of food. They eat vegetables and animals. They also eat additives. They even eat rubbish. When humans put "animals" into their mouths, have they ever thought about what the lives of the animals were like before they became "food"? Eating other animals is not as much a kind of guilt as it is a part of the food chain. However, the factory farming industry makes livestock live in extremely stressful conditions. These animals will never raise their own young or do anything that is natural or important to them. To what extent does the cruelty have to be serious enough to make people reflect on what they have done? It seems that people have forgotten that all organisms are interrelated; animals do not exist only for fulfilling human beings' desire for food.
